MARKO MITROVIĆ

TO THE NEW ENGLAND REVOLUTION FANS —

Being your head coach is a great honor and a title that comes with the responsibility of upholding the rich tradition this club has built as one of the league's founding members.

It is clear to me that the culture of success and high expectations at our club echoes throughout our region. Hard work and dedication are qualities engrained into the people of New England, and a mantra that we as a club will strive to fulfill every day. Our club has a deep history, and we look to pay homage to that in our commitment to playing with intensity and togetherness.

I am a strong believer that we will achieve success if we can create a positive and productive environment. Your devotion and support are a vital part of our club, and it is our duty to replicate that passion in everything we do both on and off the pitch.

Today is another opportunity for our team to proudly wear the Revolution crest over our hearts in front of you, the fans. We are committed to embodying that brave and relentless mindset that has been forged into our club's identity.

Our mission is simple: Play world-class football and win trophies. Whether you're a long-time Season Member, or are experiencing your first match at Gillette Stadium, we are determined to make you proud and look forward to celebrating many victories with you here in Foxborough.

SINCERELY,

Marko Mitrovic

1-0

The New England Revolution (18-12-4, 58 pts.) closed the 2026 regular season with a 1-0 defeat to Orlando City SC (13-14-7, 46 pts.) at Inter.co Stadium on Saturday, November 7. Orlando midfielder Braian Ojeda's 45th-minute stunner was the only goal in the MLS Decision Day contest between the two playoff-bound sides. The Revolution finished the regular season as the No. 3 seed in the Eastern Conference entering the Audi 2026 MLS Cup Playoffs. New England's 58 points represented the third-highest total in team history, while the 18 victories were second most in club annals.

New England came out on the front foot, creating a flurry of chances in the opening half. Defender Ilay Feingold, who made his 50th MLS appearance, doubled his previous single-game high with four shot attempts on the afternoon, including three in the first half. Dániel Gazdag nearly opened the scoring for the visitors in the 28th minute, turning and unleashing a right-footed shot that forced Orlando goalkeeper Maxime Crépeau into a diving save. Minutes later, center back Ethan Kohler met a corner kick with a header that found its way on target, but Crépeau tipped the attempt over the crossbar.

The hosts grabbed a 1-0 lead right before the break, as Ojeda collected a loose ball atop the box and curled a stinging shot beyond an outstretched Matt Turner in the 45th minute. In net for New England, Turner logged three saves as he became the first Revolution goalkeeper, and just the third player overall, to play every minute of a 34-game regular season. The MLS Goalkeeper of the Year finalist finished the regular season with 140 saves, second most in MLS. Captain Carles Gil also finished the regular season with 34 starts, reaching the mark for the second straight year and third time in his career.

'RELENTLESS' REVS NEVER SATISFIED

By EMMA MONEUSE

From the very first day of preseason, head coach Marko Mitrović has helped the New England Revolution build an identity rooted in relentlessness; not just when it comes to winning games, but staying relentlessly consistent, humble, present, and true. That mentality carried the Revolution to a third-place finish in the Eastern Conference, and it has readied them as they prepare for the first match of the postseason campaign.

The Revs have had a remarkable year thus far – one of the best in club history – finishing with 18 regular season wins, one of the strongest defensive records in the league, 11 home victories, 58 points, and countless moments to make the fans in Foxborough proud.

Of course, the playoffs are somewhat of a clean slate. They're high stakes, high pressure, and a place where anything can happen. But for a Revs side that has refused to waver from their identity this season, the approach is no different when it comes to Round One against the Philadelphia Union.

"This whole season has been step by step. We're building an identity, and I think it's that identity that comes first. That was the foundation we instilled in preseason. Then when we get into big moments like this, it's kind of falling back on what you've trained and what you've built. It's a very exciting part of the year, but it's only building on what we've already built throughout the last 10 months," explained defender Will Sands.

Mitrović has said time and again that it's all about taking it day-by-day; more specifically, taking the right actions every day and maximizing every opportunity. His message has been as consistent as the team's play, and that isn't changing now.

"Champions behave like champions before they become champions. And so, if suddenly you get to playoffs and you're just like 'Oh, now we're going to change and do something different,' well, why weren't you doing that the entire time?" said assistant coach Michael Morris. "The willingness to fight in any circumstance is amazing. You can talk about tactics and all types of things, and we definitely try to be as prepared as possible for every match, but if there aren't those core behaviors and that level of competitiveness, that willingness to fight and sometimes even suffer together, sometimes the tactics, they're just not relevant."

Earning homefield advantage after their top-four finish, the Revs enter the Round One Best-of-3 series against the Philadelphia Union as hosts in Game 1 at Gillette Stadium on Saturday afternoon. After taking down Philly twice in the regular season, the team feels confident in their understanding of the opponent.

"We know what to do to beat them. We have a clear plan. Obviously, coming from Marko and his staff, they prepare for every game in the best way. We have a clear idea of what to do. When you are a team that has a clear identity and knows what to do in every moment, you feel very confident," captain Carles Gil said ahead of Saturday's match.

At home this season, the Revs' 35 points were tied for second-most in MLS. They earned three points against the Union at Gillette Stadium from a 2-1 win back in May, followed up by another 2-1 victory at Subaru Park in October. While the wins provide some confidence, New England know that every game is different.

The Revolution enter the Audi 2026 MLS Cup Playoffs for the first time since 2023, after failing to reach the postseason in the previous two campaigns. While it feels like some time since New England have had the chance to make a run for the Cup, the club is no stranger to postseason play.

The Revolution are one of seven MLS clubs with more than 50 playoff matches played in their history. All-time, the Revs are 13-5-7 at home in the postseason, outscoring opponents 39-20 in Foxborough. The Revs have made it to the MLS Cup Final five times, yet to get their hands on the Philip F. Anschutz Trophy. With the Mitrović mindset leading the way, it feels like things could be different this time around.

"I feel like we're ready for everything because we know what to do in every moment," said Gil. "We arrive to the playoffs in the right way, after a very good regular season. Now it's the big moments coming. We have been waiting, this club, since 2023, our last playoffs. So, we're very excited."

Kickoff at Gillette Stadium is set for 2:00 p.m. ET on Saturday, and a season's worth of belief will be on display in front of the Foxborough Faithful. It's only Game 1, but for a team that has trusted their identity all year, it could be the first step toward something much bigger.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING...

ON WHETHER THE TEAM HAS TAILORED ITS PREPARATION FOR THE PLAYOFFS GIVEN THE HIGHER STAKES OF POSTSEASON PLAY...

MARKO MITROVIĆ

"I understand that perspective and it's very different in terms of when you play the [regular] season, you have the first game of the season, and if the outcome is not there, you still have 33 games to fix it. So, the amount of opportunities that you have to get somewhere, you obviously can't compare with the knockout games. But on the other side, I'm very aware that players know the rules and what's going on, and how this round plays. I don't think it's something that we have to talk with them about. I also think that we have the belief in this building that we just have to be who we are, and do what we do every day, without changing something now in our approach or comparing it with what we have done so far this season.

"But it's different because in these games, there's no three points or one point, its knockout stages, but our approach is just the same. [The postseason] was so far, and I think this team played with a high level of urgency from the very beginning. We kind of built that survival mode from the very beginning of the season. I don't think that we had that luxury where we could kind of take a break and slow down in any given moment this year. I think when you come to those knockout stage games, that's what you have to do. You have no time to slow down, you have no time to not maximize every single action on the field."

ON HOW HE FEELS THE REVOLUTION WILL MATCH UP AGAINST PHILADELPHIA...

CARLES GIL

"I feel like we're ready for everything because we know what to do in every moment. Every team is different. We played two times against Philly, and a month ago we played there. We know what to do to beat them. We have a clear plan. Obviously, coming from Marko [Mitrović] and his staff, they prepare for every game in the best way. We have a clear idea of what to do. When you are a team that has a clear identity and knows what to do in every moment, you feel very confident."

JACK'S ROAD BACK

By EMMA MONEUSE

When Jack Harrison joined the New England Revolution this past July, he hit the ground running. While he arrived to a team halfway through their season, he took the challenge in stride and started producing for the Revs almost immediately.

Playing in just seven games this season, Harrison has logged six assists, making his first contributions in just his second appearance and first start for the club. He felt at home with the Revs from the beginning, and he says the team deserves all the credit.

"It's been a pleasure to be here. For me personally, I can't thank the guys enough for making it such an easy transition. It's a pleasure coming to work with them every day and the coaching staff," Harrison said. "Playing with these guys, it just makes it so enjoyable, and when you're enjoying your football and playing like that, that's when you're the happiest and that's when you play your best, as well."

From earning an assist in his first start to a hat trick of helpers in just his third match, Harrison went on an assist streak of four straight games. He injected firepower into the Revolution attack, but unfortunately picked up a quad injury in just his seventh appearance against his former team, New York City FC.

Facing an injury is never easy, let alone on a new team, but Harrison stayed incredibly connected with the group as he worked relentlessly to find his way back to the pitch. Through early mornings and long hours, the English attacker has returned to the group at exactly the right time.

"It can be difficult sometimes going through some injuries and going through that time period, but when you have a support group like this around you, it just makes it so much easier. I'm feeling really good and I have to give Eric [Schwartz] and the medical staff a huge credit because it's not easy what they do," said Harrison. "They help me be smart and keep me balanced and it's worked so far, and I've been so happy with the process. It's made working with them really enjoyable and probably up there with one of the best experiences that I've had."

When Harrison first got hurt, he feared he was out for the season, but he didn't let that slow him down. While he was eager to push harder, the medical staff emphasized recovery, allowing the 29-year-old to rejoin the group ahead of the season's biggest games.

With the playoffs on the horizon, Harrison has gone from training on his own, to full sessions with the team, rekindling his flame with every single training. Powered by gratitude to be playing again and fueled with motivation to make a difference in the postseason, there couldn't be a better time for Harrison to be back.

The winger has already shown what he can do in a Revs jersey. Now he has the chance to do it on the biggest stage, with renewed energy and a locker room that has been behind him the whole way.

“It's great to finally just push on in such a crucial part of the season. These are the games that you want to be a part of as a player and playing these types of games. So, I'm so excited to get back out there,” he said.

The Foxborough Faithful will be just as happy to see his potential return as the Revs host the Union in Game 1 of the Round One Best-of-Three series on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. ET.
