New England had a bright start to the match and nearly stunned Inter Miami by finding the scoresheet within 10 minutes. Revolution captain Carles Gil lofted a cross to the back post towards a streaking Brandon Bye, whose header ricocheted off the crossbar. Miami rebounded from the early chance and began testing New England's backline, as Messi forced a diving save out of Matt Turner in the 14th minute. Turner posted four saves on the night in what was his last match before departing for international duty next week with the United States Men's National Team.

Miami found its breakthrough in the 32nd minute from Tadeo Allende, who drove a low shot into the net on Messi's assist. The hosts doubled their lead moments before the halftime whistle, as Messi pounced on a turnover and slipped a centering pass to Jordi Alba, who touched the ball around a sliding defender and finished with his left foot from close range.

Interim Head Coach Pablo Moreira made two changes at the intermission, as Luca Langoni replaced Mamadou Fofana and Alhassan Yusuf came on for Allan Oyirwoth. The change paid dividends before the hour mark as New England pulled one back through Turgeman in the 59th minute. The 21-year-old striker collected a pass from Gil, nutmegged an opponent, and rippled the net with a powerful right-footed shot past a frozen Miami goalkeeper.

With his second goal since arriving to New England, Turgeman became the first Revolution player to score in each of his first two MLS matches. Gil recorded his team-leading 13th of the season on the play and finished with a game-high five key passes.

The Revolution's comeback attempt was cut short by Miami's third goal coming quickly off the ensuing kickoff. Allende scored in the 60th minute to restore the two-goal advantage, and Alba completed his brace in the 63rd minute to put the match out of reach. In an effort to cut into the deficit, the Revolution deployed Argentinian forward Tomas Chancalay in the 71st minute, who logged three shot attempts in his brief appearance.

After a break for FIFA's October international window, New England will conclude the 2025 MLS regular season on Saturday, October 18 vs. Chicago Fire FC.
