Chicago immediately began the night on the front foot, opening the scoring within two minutes of the opening whistle as forward Jonathan Bamba tapped a long ball from Brian Gutierrez under goalkeeper Matt Turner, who had come charging off his line. The hosts doubled their lead eight minutes later, as Philip Zinckernagel unleashed a long-range strike into the bottom-left corner, bouncing just over Turner's outstretched palm.

The Revolution rallied back and applied their share of pressure in Chicago's end. New England had a powerful strike by Alhassan Yusuf denied by Chicago's Chris Brady. The rebound cycled to Miller inside the penalty area, but his right-footed shot struck the post. Gil also had a low shot on frame saved by Brady.

Midway through the second half, Chicago added a third goal with Hugo Cuypers tallying in the 68th minute. New England continued applying pressure in Chicago's end before Miller finally pulled one back in the 78th minute, the second goal of his career. The 17-year-old left back received a through ball from Argentine forward Tomás Chancalay and slotted his shot into the far corner. Chancalay registered his second assist of the season and recorded a team-best four key passes in the match.

In stoppage time, defender Will Sands drew a foul inside the box as he was fouled by former Revolution defender Omar Gonzalez. Gil stepped up to the spot and buried his attempt, giving him 10 goals on the season. Along with his 11 assists, Gil now has reached double-digit goals and assists for the third time in MLS. Gil and Miller shared the team lead with four shot attempts each, a single-game high for the Homegrown defender. Off the bench, Ugandan international midfielder Allan Oyirwoth, 18, made his MLS debut with a 21-minute shift in the midfield.

The Revolution return home next Saturday night to host Toronto FC for a 7:30 p.m. ET kickoff at Gillette Stadium.
