In front of the fourth-largest regular season crowd in Revolution club history, Inter Miami got on the board first in the 27th minute. A giveaway by New England's backline fell kindly to the feet of Messi near the penalty spot. The reigning MLS MVP slotted his first-time finish past Revolution goalkeeper Aljaž Ivačić for the opening tally.

Roughly 10 minutes later, Inter Miami doubled its lead as midfielder Sergio Busquets played a through ball to Messi, who finished the play for his second goal of the night in the 38th minute. New England nearly pulled one back shortly before intermission, with Leo Campana drilling a shot on target, but Miami goalkeeper Oscar Ustari punched it away to preserve Miami's advantage.

The Revolution heaped on the pressure after the intermission in search of a breakthrough. Head Coach Caleb Porter turned to his bench and deployed forward Tomás Chancalay in the 62nd minute. Soon after, Chancalay had his best chance of the match when a shot from Campana forced a save by Ustari. Chancalay pounced on the rebound but put his shot off the side netting.

New England cut Miami's lead in half in the 79th minute, as Gil weaved his way through Miami's defense and finished with his right foot for his team-leading eighth goal of the season. The Revolution captain has reached the scoresheet in four straight games and is now only two goal contributions away from tying the club record held by Taylor Twellman.

Gil and Campana each registered four shot attempts to lead the home side, with Campana also recording three key passes in a 90-minute shift against his former club. Luca Langoni started for the second straight match and also ended the night with three key passes.
