Despite a scoreless first half, New England created plenty of attacking chances in front of the home crowd of 22,391. Forward Tomás Chancalay nearly opened the scoring in just the eighth minute, sending a right-footed effort wide of the right post. In the 21st minute, Revolution captain Carles Gil split Toronto's defense with a long-range shot from outside the box, finding the hands of Toronto goalkeeper Luka Gavran. Moments later, the Spaniard slipped a pass through Toronto's defense to Alhassan Yusuf in the penalty area, but his first-time shot sailed over the crossbar.

Toronto broke the stalemate in the 75th minute, with winger Theo Corbeanu slotting home a low strike past a diving Matt Turner. The goalkeeper posted a four-save performance in his sixth consecutive start for New England, including a point-blank save on Toronto forward Jules-Anthony Vilsaint in the 83rd minute to keep the game within reach.

Ugandan international Allan Oyirwoth earned his first career MLS start tonight, recording a pair of shots with one attempt on frame in his 87-minute shift. The 18-year-old nearly scored his first MLS goal when he unleashed a shot on frame from outside the box in the 83rd minute, but his attempt was saved by Gavran. In search of an equalizer, Head Coach Caleb Porter deployed several second-half substitutes, including Revolution II forward Sharod George, 21, who made his MLS debut tonight in his second straight match with the first team.

In the final moments of the contest, the Revolution found the equalizer through Langoni. Right wingback Ilay Feingold initiated the play, crossing a ball into the box that deflected off the head of a Toronto defender and fell kindly to Langoni at the top of the area. The Argentine took a touch and rifled a shot towards the Toronto goal, which deflected off a TFC player and past Gavran for the tying strike.

The Revolution remain alive in the Eastern Conference playoff picture as they head back on the road next Saturday, Sept. 20 for a 2:30 p.m. kickoff at the Philadelphia Union.
