New England came out on the front foot, opening the scoring in the 24th minute. Homegrown forward Malcolm Fry, in his 50th MLS NEXT Pro career start, surged up the right flank and into the box, drilling a low shot that forced a save from Toronto's goalkeeper. The deflection fell kindly to Hutchinson, who lifted his shot into the top-right corner of the net for his fourth tally of the season, his second goal in his last three outings. The Jamaican striker paced New England's attack today with a career-high four shots, all on target.

New England extended its lead in the 56th minute through Diarbian, who recorded his fifth goal of the campaign. Dias set up the play, splitting Toronto's defense with a through ball to Diarbian, a Cranston, R.I. native, who slotted home a left-footed finish. Dias logged all 90 minutes in his 92nd MLS NEXT Pro career appearance today, matching Colby Quiñones for the most appearances in Revolution II history.

Toronto midfielder Patrick McDonald pulled one back for the visitors via penalty kick in the 69th minute, drilling a shot past an outstretched Donovan Parisian. Parisian, a 2025 MLS SuperDraft first-round selection, made two saves between the posts in his third straight start for New England. Despite continued pressure from Toronto's attack, including a goal that was disallowed due to a foul from the visitors in stoppage time, New England's defense maintained its strong form to see out the win.

New England will resume MLS NEXT Pro regular season action next Thursday, September 18, visiting New York City FC II at Icahn Stadium. The 7:30 p.m. ET kickoff is available to watch live via
