New England enters the final matchday of the regular season locked into a top-three spot in the Eastern Conference. With home-field advantage already secured through the first round of the Audi 2026 MLS Cup Playoffs, New England trails Inter Miami CF by just one point for the No. 2 seed. The Revolution enter the final matchday ranked top-five in MLS victories (18) and points (58). A draw or win in Saturday's match would see New England finish the campaign with its second-highest single-season points total in club history. With a victory in Orlando, Head Coach Marko Mitrović would become just the seventh manager to win 19 games in their debut MLS season.

Last Sunday, the Revolution closed its regular season home slate with a 2-1 defeat to Inter Miami CF in front of a season-high 54,112 fans at Gillette Stadium - the third-largest home crowd for a regular season game in team history. New England compiled an 11-4-2 record in Foxborough this season, marking the sixth time the team has won 11 or more home games in a campaign. The team's road form has also been impressive, as only one team (Inter Miami) has more away wins than the Revs' seven.

Orlando, also qualified for a postseason berth, is winless in its last three games including a lopsided 4-0 loss on the road to Charlotte FC on Halloween. The Lions have allowed the second-most goals (78) and shots on target (232) in MLS this season, though their potent attack is tied for the sixth-most goals scored (62). Orlando's production runs through Martin Ojeda and Antoine Griezmann with 16 and 14 goals, respectively, while Ivan Angulo (13) and United States international Justin Ellis (11) have each collected double-digit assists.

The first meeting between New England and Orlando was a thriller on Sept. 19 at Gillette Stadium, with the Revs tallying twice in second-half stoppage time to claim a 4-2 victory. Peyton Miller recorded his first career multi-goal performance, netting a 93rd-minute game-winning tally, while captain Carles Gil also added a brace along with a game-winning assist. In 12 career games against Orlando, Gil owns eight goals and eight assists, his third-most helpers against any MLS opponent. With an assist on Saturday, Miller would reach 10 helpers on the season, marking the first time the Revolution have two players with double-digit assists in the same campaign.

Gil is on the cusp of several noteworthy achievements entering the final match of his eighth MLS season. The Spanish playmaker is looking to finish as the league leader in key passes for the third in his career (2021 & 2022), while it would be his sixth consecutive season finishing in the top-three leaguewide. The captain needs one more goal contribution in the finale to set a new single-season career high. Meanwhile, forward Dor Turgeman is challenging Gil for the club's Golden Boot, having boosted his total to 12 tallies on the year. Turgeman has five markers and two multi-goal games in his last five outings. With the playoffs looming, the Israel international is getting hot at the right time, as the striker's 10 goals since July rank eighth leaguewide.

Between the sticks, Matt Turner is in line to become the third player in club history, and the first goalkeeper, to play every minute of a 34-game regular season, joining Jose Goncalves (2013) and Dave Romney (2023). His 137 saves are second-most in MLS this season and represent a new career high, four shy of the Revolution single-season record set by Matt Reis in 2006. In advanced metrics, the MLS Goalkeeper of the Year contender is the league leader in goals prevented (-16.05) and goals added (17.06), per American Soccer Analysis, both on pace for new MLS single-season records.
