REVOLUTION GAME NOTES

SEATTLE GAME NOTES

PREVIEW SOUND (10/8): Marko Mitrović and D Ethan Kohler

Saturday's meeting will showcase two clubs that rank among the league's top defensive sides. New England and Seattle have conceded the sixth- and fifth-fewest goals in MLS, respectively, through 27 matches this season. Seattle will make its first trip to Foxborough since 2018, with the all-time series knotted at 5-5-5, though the Revolution own a 4-1-2 advantage at home. The Sounders are currently riding an eight-game unbeaten streak and are fresh off a 2-1 win over Sporting Kansas City. Paul Rothrock and U.S. international Cristian Roldan share the team lead with five goals apiece, while Albert Rusnák sits among the league leaders with 12 assists.

New England is one win shy of reaching 10 home victories in a single season for the sixth time in club history. The Revolution have been hard to beat in Foxborough, boasting a 9-2-2 record at Gillette Stadium. New England's 29 home points and nine victories are both tied for second best in MLS. Under first-year Head Coach Marko Mitrović, New England's next victory will give the team 15 regular season wins for just the fourth time in the post-shootout era (since 2000).

The Revolution will assemble for their first match in two weeks with several key reinforcements back from international duty, including MLS 22 Under 22 contenders Peyton Miller and Brooklyn Raines, who both made their senior international debuts with the United States Men's National Team. Miller earned his first two senior caps, with one start, while Raines played in all four victories for the national team, with two starts. Miller, a third-year pro, has netted three goals in his last two MLS matches, including a brace on September 19 which earned him MLS Player of the Matchday honors.

Forward Dor Turgeman and defender Ilay Feingold also return to the team after serving on international duty with the Israel Men's National Team. Turgeman has hit his stride since the World Cup break, tallying one goal and three assists in his last two outings. The 22-year-old strikers has solidified himself as a central figure in New England's attack with seven goals and six assists this season, his first full campaign in MLS. Since MLS play resumed in July, Turgeman ranks seventh leaguewide in expected goals (6.17).

Midfielder Carles Gil continues to pull the strings in New England's midfield, leading the team with a career-high 12 goals and nine assists. Currently the MLS leader with 77 chances created, Gil needs one more assist to become just the second MLS player with double-digit assists in at least six consecutive seasons. The only other player to accomplish the feat will be sitting on the opposing bench Saturday: Seattle assistant coach Preki. Gil will look to link up with Dániel Gazdag, who is targeting his fourth straight start on Saturday. Meanwhile, veteran Diego Fagundez (299) is on the cusp of 300 Revolution appearances across all competitions. Fagundez has enjoyed success against Seattle in his career, owning a team-high five goals and two assists in 13 starts against the Sounders.

New England's guardian of the goal, Matt Turner, is on track to post his best statistical season in MLS, and one of the best the league has seen. Turner recently surpassed his previous career high for saves, now with 104 on the year, while his -11.68 goals prevented, per American Soccer Analysis, would be a new MLS record. Turner has benefited from consistency on the backline with Will Sands starting all 27 matches at left back and Ethan Kohler, the league's most accurate passer (95.8%) entering Matchday 29, anchoring the middle. Center back Josh Wynder seeks his second straight start after featuring in the Starting XI for the first time at Real Salt Lake on Sept. 26.
