The match saw its first twist in the 17th minute when center back Brayan Ceballos was forced to exit with an injury. Ethan Kohler, who started the game in the midfield, shifted back to central defense for the remainder of the match. Columbus controlled the early tempo and nearly broke through for the opening goal with a close-range effort in the 23rd minute, but goalkeeper Matt Turner reacted instantly to deny the shot and keep the match level. The visitors continued to apply pressure and moments later found their opener as Diego Rossi skimmed a pass across the box to Max Arfsten, who cut back onto his right foot and curled his shot past Turner.

The Revolution were rejuvenated after the halftime break and needed less than 10 minutes to pull level. After Ilay Feingold drew a foul outside the box, Langoni delivered a driven service into the area for a diving Turgeman, who directed his header into the net for his fifth MLS goal. Langoni, who now owns a career-high six assists in the last five matches, ranks second in MLS helpers this season.

New England completed the comeback in the 85th minute after Turgeman was dragged down in the box, causing referee Tim Ford to signal to the penalty spot. Gil calmly slotted his penalty past Columbus' Patrick Schulte for his 50th regular season goal. Gil and Lee Nguyen are now the only players in Revolution history with 50 goals and 50 assists in league play. The tally also moved Gil past Nguyen into sole possession of first place for the club's most penalty kick goals (18). Turner also continues to climb the record books, as he became the second Revolution goalkeeper with 50 regular season victories.
