The Revolution, one of four teams in the Eastern Conference already qualified for the 2026 Audi MLS Cup Playoffs, embark on their final four matches of the regular season in a tightly contested Eastern Conference. Entering this weekend's action, third-place New England has a six-point cushion above sixth-place Philadelphia. The Union have been flying since the World Cup break, going unbeaten in 15 straight matches with 12 wins in that span. Meanwhile, New England has collected victories in its last two matches, including last Saturday's 1-0 shutout win over Chicago Fire FC behind midfielder Matt Polster's winning goal in the first half.

New England, searching for its first win at Subaru Park since 2021, has emerged as one of the stronger road clubs in MLS since the league resumed play in July. The Revolution's six road victories this season are tied for fifth-most in MLS. In nine away matches since MLS returned to play in July, New England has tallied a 5-3-1 record. On the other side, the resurgent Union are 7-3-5 on their home soil, following a 2-2 draw with Charlotte FC last weekend.

Saturday's match features five players who were announced as part of the MLS 22 Under 22 Class of 2026 earlier this week. The Union's Cavan Sullivan topped the list along with teammates Neil Pierre, and Frankie Westfield, while New England's Peyton Miller (No. 6) and midfielder Brooklyn Raines (No. 10) also earned the recognition. Miller, who has made the list in each of his three MLS seasons, has now found the scoresheet in four of his last five matches, with three goals and three assists during that stretch. New England is unbeaten, 9-0-2, this season when Miller records a goal or assist. The 18-year-old leads the team with 34 shots on target, while Raines has cemented himself as a central figure in New England's midfield with 27 starts to date. The fifth-year pro has three assists in his last five games.

Goalkeeper Matt Turner collected his sixth clean sheet of the season in last Saturday's win with a six-save performance. Turner has backstopped the Revolution to 16 victories in 2026, second-most among MLS goalkeepers and one shy of matching his own club record set during the 2021 campaign. The 32-year-old is in line for his 150th appearance for the Revolution across all competitions this weekend. His counterpart in goal for Philadelphia, Jamaica international Andre Blake, is also a league legend, now in his 13th season with the Union.

Saturday will be a homecoming of sorts for midfielder Dániel Gazdag, who has suited up for eight appearances, four of them starts, since joining the Revolution in September. Gazdag is set to play against his former team this weekend, having carved a stellar resume during his five seasons in Philadelphia from 2021-2025. The 30-year-old Hungarian stands as Philadelphia's all-time leading scorer with 59 regular season tallies, and helped the club win the Eastern Conference championship in 2022.

Gazdag will look to combine with Revolution midfielder Carles Gil, whose 23 goal contributions are three shy of his career best set in 2023. The league leader in key passes (84) has recorded five goals and five assists in New England's last nine matches.
