RECAP: Revolution Win Fourth Straight, 3-2, over Red Bull New York

New England clinches home-field advantage in first round of the Audi 2026 MLS Playoffs

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. (Oct. 28, 2026) – The New England Revolution (18-10-4, 58 pts.) extended their winning streak to four games by edging out Red Bull New York (11-15-6, 39 pts.), 3-2, on Wednesday night at Gillette Stadium. Striker Dor Turgeman bagged a brace tonight, while Carles Gil became just the eighth player in MLS history to record 100 regular season assists. After New York evened the match 2-2 with two second-half goals, Dániel Gazdag netted the winner in the 83rd minute. Goalkeeper Matt Turner logged eight saves to help New England grab all three points.

With tonight's victory, the Revolution are guaranteed a top-three finish in the Eastern Conference, securing home-field advantage in the first round of the Audi 2026 MLS Playoffs. New England's 18 wins are now second most in club history, while the 11 home wins are one shy of matching the Revolution record.

New England needed just nine minutes to grab the lead as Turgeman continued his red-hot form with his fourth goal in as many matches. Fellow Israeli Ilay Feingold sparked the attack with a short pass to Gil, who continued the move to Turgeman at the top of the box. The forward rifled a right-footed finish beyond the reach of the diving Red Bull goalkeeper Ethan Horvath. Now with 13 goals and 13 assists on the season, Gil has matched his single-season high for goal contributions (26).

Red Bull pressed for an equalizer throughout the first half, forcing Turner into five saves before the break. The visitors' most dangerous sequence came in the 42nd minute when Cade Cowell's saved shot fell kindly to Jorge Ruvalcaba. However, Feingold produced back-to-back defensive plays, first blocking Ruvalcaba's shot and then thwarting Mohammed Sofo seconds later to preserve New England's 1-0 advantage ahead of halftime.

The Revolution wasted no time adding to their lead after the break, with Turgeman completing his second brace of the season less than a minute into the second half. Feingold again initiated the attack, feeding Luca Langoni on the right side of the penalty area, where the winger delivered a ball across the face of goal for Turgeman to tap home. The Argentine logged his seventh assist of the season in his third straight start, while Feingold notched two helpers in the same night for the second time in his MLS career.

However, Red Bull answered quickly, with Cowell cutting into the deficit in the 51st minute before U.S. international Julian Hall brought the visitors level in the 64th minute. New England nearly regained the lead moments later, but Langoni's attempt from the center of the box, created by a well-timed cross from Peyton Miller, smashed off the right post.

The Revolution rallied in the 83rd minute through Gazdag, who netted his sixth goal of the campaign and his second for New England. After entering as a substitute in the 62nd minute, Miller tested Horvath with a left-footed shot that spilled into the path of Gazdag for a simple finish.

In net for New England, Turner stood tall in the final minutes, turning away a close-range effort for his eighth save of the night, one shy of his single-game MLS high. With the result, Turner set a new career high with his 18th win of the season, also a new Revolution single-season record.

MATCH NOTES

- The Revolution remain in second place in the Eastern Conference and now have a two-point lead over third-place Inter Miami, their next opponent on Sunday.
- New England's 18 victories are the club's second most in a single season in club history, and the second-most leaguewide this year.
- The result gives New England 11 home victories, one shy of tying the club's single-season record reached three previous times.
- M Carles Gil became the eighth player in MLS history to reach 100 regular season assists, tallying a helper in a fourth straight match. The Spaniard added a team-high four key passes to give him a league-best 91 on the season.
- Gil is the fourth-fastest player in league annals to achieve the 100-assist milestone, doing so in his 225th MLS appearance. The last player to reach the mark was Brad Davis in 2013.
- With a 90-minute shift, Gil surpassed Chris Tierney (19,422) for the fifth-most regular season minutes played in club history.
- F Dor Turgeman tallied his second multi-goal game of the campaign, giving him 12 goals on the season and five in his last four appearances. Turgeman has 10 goals since the World Cup break.
- Turgeman matched his MLS career high with five shot attempts in the victory.
- F/W Luca Langoni earned his seventh assist of the season on Turgeman's second tally.
- D Ilay Feingold was credited with secondary helpers on both of Turgeman's goals, the second multi-assist performance of his MLS career.
- M Dániel Gazdag netted his second goal for the Revolution and fifth of the campaign, a game-winning strike. The tally marked New England's eighth game-winning goal scored after the 75th minute this season.
- GK Matt Turner's eight saves are one shy of his career high. His 18 wins on the season are a Revolution single-season record for a goalkeeper.
